Free Memory Comparison Tool In September 2018, Oxford University's Centre for Evidence-Based Management (CEBM) will host an event entitled "China's Corporate Governance". The event, to be held at the University of Oxford's Saïd Business School, is one of several seminars run in conjunction with the Centre's Global Leadership Scholarships initiative. The event, to be held on 3-4 September 2018, will explore the growing power and influence of China's state-owned and state-controlled corporations. Sessions include: Measuring corporate governance indicators Industrial policy, industrial reform, and industrial revival Enterprise governance and compliance Policy reform and governance in the banking and insurance sectors Public-private partnerships The event will be followed by a reception with buffet food, drinks, and entertainment. General information on the event is available from Oxford University's Centre for Evidence-Based Management. The Centre's Global Leadership Scholarship programme offers a combination of trips and scholarships for early-stage research and teaching careers. It recognises that business schools need to provide experience of study and teaching in a high-quality, connected environment; candidates will work alongside established academics and develop professionally alongside experienced business school faculty. Applications are open for 2019's round of the Global Leadership Scholarship programme. We're looking for scholars with an interest in any subject relevant to business school education: theories of the firm, business ethics, innovation, strategy and finance. The 2019 deadline for applications is 15 February 2019. A large number of organisations, including ACAS, Alexander & Bonham-Carter, Allen & Overy, the British Academy, Harvard Business School, the Institute of Chartered Accountants, KPMG, Nesta, the Oxford Economic Review, and the Sutton Trust, are also offering scholarships to applicants. How to apply to the Global Leadership Scholarship? Applicants can find information, including links to application forms, here.
